

Stage fright! In a few days' time, a group of FT columnists, including me and Robert Shrimmsley (above), are taking part in a theatrical experiment. We'll be turning our tales — from moments that changed everything to secrets and lies and high-street shopping — into live performance, accompanied by specially composed music and multimedia effects. FT On Stage is curated by some fabulous Frenchwomen who want to find ways of turning journalism into an exciting experience. If you're in London on April 9 and feel like watching us being forced way out of our comfort zone, please come along to the
